Nature shares its songs to local watercolor artist

Echoes of nature create a hymnal of inspiration for artist Christen Walden. Watercolor paintings of nests, leaves, birds - or even the intricacy of their wings - reveal the details few people see up close in nature.

Details, like the lines and cracks in a dried leaf, or a pebbled bird egg shell, are brought to life through graphite sketching on paper and canvas with the help of a magnifying glass.

Each piece begins with something discovered - like the bird nest found in a plastic container, by her husband, Shawn, or leaves or pinecones picked up on walks in the woods near their home.

Muted tones of grays, greens, browns, blues and red create a hauntingly, ethereal beauty of her, sometimes abstract, art.

This is further complemented by the titles. Christen has a collection of old hymnals where she seeks passages, or she'll look for a Scripture, when naming her completed art.

Eight leaves in a row painted on watercolor paper, and then mounted on a 72"x36" box canvas, is the show signature piece, "Woodland Hymn." Ranging in size from miniature 5x5-inch paintings to 36x24-inches, there are 42 works in the show, available to purchase.

"Leaves, botanicals, and fragments of nature compel me to create visual narratives in watercolor and pencil. The stories are woven in layers of graphite or watercolor paint. The beauty of past seasons reveals itself in the lace of leaves and bones of trees, and it is those vestiges of nature I seek to reveal in my artwork."

Christen Walden sketches in one of her journals on a winter day earlier this year. Above, a peek at some of the art she has created for her show which opens Monday, Aug. 31.

Christen resides in rural Oklahoma with her husband, and her stepdaughter. She teaches art appreciation at Cameron University-Duncan. She earned her B.A. in Art from Cameron University in 2003 and her M.F.A. in painting from Texas Woman's University in 2008. She exhibits her artwork at the Davis and Blevins Gallery in Saint Jo, Texas, owned by Donna Howell-Sickles, known for her vibrant paintings of cowgirls. Donna's work was exhibited at the Heritage Center in 2009.

Christen has had a few solo exhibits throughout Texas and Oklahoma. This will be her first show at the Heritage Center.

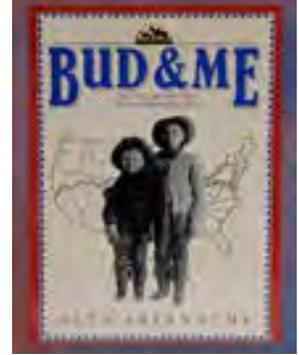

Woodland Hymn: Sketches and Paintings by Christen Walden opens Monday, Aug. 31 - Oct. 31. A reception for Christen and Shawn will be held 1-3 p.m. Saturday, Sept. 12. It is open to members and the public.

NATIONAL DAY OF THE COWBOY

Thank you to everyone (more than 900 of you!) who came out for the annual National Day of the Cowboy celebration where we honored the legacy of the Singing Cowboy! It was a day of music - thanks to the Cowboys at Heart band, games, and Minnie Pearl's "How-dee!" greetings. Glenda Carlile, children's author, even remarked how much fun she had meeting so many people. Mark July 23, 2016, on your calendar!

Fans of cowboy ballads and country music listen to Allen Wooten and the Cowboys at Heart perform. These photos and more can be found on our Facebook page: www.facebook.com/onthechisholmtrail

Kids create at the art station, thanks to Oklahoma Arts Council funding!
